

Nancy Sherman BIO

Nancy Sherman is University Professor and Professor of Philosophy at Georgetown University, where she has taught since 1989. She has affiliate appointments with Georgetown Law's Center on National Security and the Law and the Kennedy Institute of Ethics. From 1997-1999, she served as inaugural holder of the Distinguished Chair in Ethics at the US Naval Academy, helping to design and teach the brigade-wide military ethics course and lay the groundwork for the Stockdale Center for Ethical Leadership at the Naval Academy. She is an expert in ethics, the history of moral philosophy, moral psychology, and military ethics. Sherman is a New York Times Notable Author. Her books include Afterwar: Healing the Moral Wounds of our Soldiers (Oxford, 2015); The Untold War: Inside the Hearts, Minds, and Souls of our Soldiers (W.W. Norton, 2010); Stoic Warriors: The Ancient Philosophy Behind the Military Mind (Oxford, 2005); Making a Necessity of Virtue: Aristotle and Kant on Virtue (Cambridge, 1997); The Fabric of Character: Aristotle's Theory of Virtue, (Oxford 1989). She is also the editor of Critical Essays on the Classics: Aristotle's Ethics, (Rowman and Littlefield, 1999). She has published over 60 articles and has delivered more than 60 named or endowed lectures and keynote or plenary addresses here and abroad.

Sherman has received fellowships from the Guggenheim Foundation, the Woodrow Wilson Center, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the American Council for Learned Societies, the Mellon Foundation, the Yale Whitney Humanities Center, the American Philosophical Society, the Newcombe Fellowship of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, and NYU's Center for Ballet and the Arts. She sits on the American Academy of Arts and Sciences Veterans Affairs Working Group, has advised the Army and Marine Corps as well as the Veterans Administration on suicide prevention and issues of moral injury and mental health, and in 2005 visited Guantanamo Bay Detention Center as part of an independent observer team assessing the medical and mental health care of detainees.

Sherman received her BA magna cum laude with honors from Bryn Mawr College and her PhD from Harvard where she received the George Plympton Adam Prize for the most distinguished dissertation in the area of history of philosophy. She also holds an MLitt from the University of Edinburgh. She was an Assistant and Associate Professor at Yale before joining the faculty at Georgetown. Sherman has research training in psychoanalysis from the Washington Psychoanalytic Institute. She is a frequent contributor to the media on issues of military moral injury, PTSD, resilience, and Stoicism.
